1.0 INTRODUCTION

1.1 APPOINTMENT

1.1.1 Wylie Shanks Architects (WSA) have been appointed by East Ayrshire Council to propose a strategy of conservation works for the grave markers within Dalmellington Old Kirkyard as part of a wider East Ayrshire Coalfield Communities Landscape Partnership.

1.2 SITE INSPECTION

1.2.1 Wendy Corrigan of Wylie Shanks Architects visited the site on 15th November 2019.

1.2.2 The weather was clear and frosty.

1.2.3 The record of locations and inscriptions, included under Appendix A of this report, was used as the basis for this survey. It was not possible to locate a number of the grave markers noted in this document. These have been clearly identified in the survey included within Section 2. For ease of identification the first two surnames on each grave marker, and the first date – usually the date of the erection of the stone – is included next to the photograph of each stone. The names were taken from the document within Appendix 2. Wherever possible these were cross checked during the inspection, but in some cases this was not possible, either due to restricted access, vegetation, deterioration of the inscription, heavy lichen growth, or subsequently toppled stones.

1.3 DESCRIPTION OF SITE

1.3.1 The Old Kirkyard is situated off the High Street, immediately to the east of the town centre.

1.3.2 The Kirkyard, including the Macadam Mausoleum, is Historic Environment Scotland Category B listed and is within Dalmellington Conservation Area.

1.3.3 Surrounded by an irregular stone wall the Kirkyard is accessed from the eastern side by a footpath from the High Street. Almost centrally located is the Macadam Mausoleum.

1.3.4 The grave markers – dating from late 17th century to early 20th century - are irregularly located and include simple horizontal and vertical stone slabs, granite memorials, wall monuments, obelisks, and the classical Macadam Mausoleum.

1.3.5 Certain areas of the graveyard are heavily overgrown which restricted access during the survey.

3.0 PROPOSALS

3.1 These proposals take into cognisance the conservation strategy proposed in the Conservation Study prepared by Peter Drummond Architects in February 2019, notably that the archaeological significance of the cemetery should be protected. It is also recognised that any groundbreaking work would require archaeological support.

3.2 In addition the Historic Scotland Guide for Practitioners 'Conservation of Historic Graveyards' (2001) has also been used as guidance.

3.2 A conservative approach has been taken to the proposals in order to maintain the character of the graveyard. Gentle stone cleaning has only been recommended where there is heavy moss growth which is obscuring the stone and also holding moisture, therefore accelerating the natural stone decay process. The drawing below categorises the proposals in to seven groups:

1. No work
2. Gentle cleaning with a dry brush
3. Introduction of additional support where a stone is heavily leaning
4. Pinning and consolidation where there is heavy delamination
5. Building up the ground where footings are exposed
6. Reconstruction
7. Further investigations in certain areas to develop proposals.

The numbers noted alongside each of the grave markers in Section 2 correlate to the numbers above.

3.3 It is presumed that some clearing of the heavy vegetation will also be carried out, in particular the removal of the invasive rhododendron bushes.

3.4 It is recommended that care is taken when the vegetation is cut back as it is likely that some of the missing grave markers and pieces thereof are hidden in the undergrowth and may be in a condition to be reinstated.

3.5 Certain areas are noted as requiring further investigation beyond the scope of this initial appraisal, potentially with lifting gear to move stones.

3.6 Where stones have been toppled and there is no base evident the proposal is to leave them in situ. However consideration might be given to protecting certain stones due to their age to prevent damage from grass cutting machines. Examples of such stones are nos. 58, 175 and 200. This approach could also be considered for some of the smaller older stones, such as no 134, which are more difficult to spot.

3.7 A number of the markers are notes as leaning, however this is not necessarily a concern unless the tilt is significant. Certain stones have been highlighted as potentially requiring additional support. These are 4, 7 & 19.

3.8 Due to their age and therefore significance two markers have been identified as requiring pinning and consolidation to prevent further deterioration. These are 46 & 141.

3.9 It should be noted that a separate, more detailed, scope of works has been prepared for the Mausoleum, shown on the plan as number 145.

AutoCAD drawing amendments must also be made on hard disc.
